

How do you fix a broken pumpkin?

A PUMPKIN PATCH!

THE PERFECT PUMPKIN IN THE PATCH

Kirby was at the local Farmer's Market looking for the perfect round pumpkin.

"It has to be the biggest and a perfect circle!" Kirby said excitedly.

"Not all pumpkins grow perfectly, Kirby," said his mother. "There are so many different shapes, sizes and colors that are really neat too!"

"I guess that's true. Look at that one!" Kirby said pointing at a pumpkin that was a brighter orange than any other one in the patch.

"Wow!" said Kirby's mom, "That one is really neat, and it has a long curly stem."

Kirby hopped over to the pumpkin and picked it up.

"This is it. This is the one!" Kirby said smiling.

"That will be five dollars," said the farmer.

Kirby dug in his pouch for his money.

"Oh no!" Kirby exclaimed, "I only have four dollars."

As Kirby sadly started to hop the pumpkin back where he found it, the farmer came up behind him and said, "I tell you what, if you help me line the rest of my pumpkins up so that they look better to sell, I will let you have that pumpkin for four dollars."

Kirby looked at the rest of the pumpkins and knew that he could easily line them up.

"I can do that!" he said.

"Thank you so much, Kirby!" said the farmer. "I am not as young as you, and that helped me a lot. It's so nice of you. I hope that you enjoy your pumpkin!"

"You're welcome. Thank you for the chance to earn the pumpkin that I wanted!" said Kirby.

DID YOU KNOW?

Before people had money, they traded for the goods they needed. A farmer might trade vegetables with a weaver for cloth.

As time went by, people used objects, such as beads or shells for money. Coins were later made from metal. We no longer use beads or shells, but we still use money, including coins, paper money and plastic cards. People still trade goods and services. Almost every country in the world has its own money - or currency. People are paid money for the work they do, and they use money to buy the things they need and want.
